DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

1. Claim 2 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

In claim 2, it is unclear how "sub-sampling frames" as recited in line 1 relates to "sub-sampling pixels" as recited in claim 1, line 3. If it is the same, Examiner suggest changing "sub-sampling frames" as recited in claim 2, to "sub-sampling pixels" as recited in claim 1.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1 – 20, are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hoffert et al. (US 5,047,853) in view of Brusewitz et al. (US 6,384,862).

Regarding claims 1 and 15, Hoffert '853 discloses compression and decompression of Digital video data (i.e. fig. 1, col. 1, lines 15+), selecting a code based on a number of bits from each pixel selected from pixels (i.e. fig. 2), run-length encoding repeated instances (i.e. fig. 10, 107), repeating steps until each pixel is encoded in an encoded data buffer (i.e. col. 12, lines 1+) and as for repeating steps, the digital video compression process (disclosed by Hoffert '853) is an iterative process of pixels, which meets the claimed limitations of repeating steps (b) and (c), and for streaming buffer is an inherent feature necessitated by the digital video processing for storing the digital video and transmitting.

Although, Hoffert '853 fails to explicitly teach Sub-sampling pixels from an image.

However, the above mention claimed limitations are well-known in the art as evidenced by Brusewitz '862, in particular (i.e. fig. 1, sub-sampler 20, col. 1, lines 41+) teaches sub-sampling image.

In view of the above, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention was made to modify the system of Hoffert '853 as taught by Brusewitz '862 for customizing the images to the viewer's specifications (i.e. col. 1, lines 10+).

Regarding claims 2 - 3, combination teaching of Hoffert '853 and Brusewitz '862 Teaches setting and assigning temporal resolution rate of e.g.  $1/30^{\text{th}}$  of second (i.e. col. 6, lines 33+ of Hoffert '853), therefore it would have been obvious to reduce or increase the sub-sampling rate base on desired design, and as for image dimension, since the image dimension is related to sub-sampling rate, therefore it would have been obvious to assign a rate base on desired image dimension.

Regarding claims 4 and 5, combination of Hoffert '853 and Brusewitz '862 teaches number of bits is five (i.e. fig. 1 of Hoffert '853).

Regarding claims 6 and 7, combination of Hoffert '853 and Brusewitz '862 teaches series of buffer (i.e. fig. 1, 22 and 30 of fig. 1 of Brusewitz '862) and storage (i.e. fig. 1, storage 34).

Art Unit: 2613

Regarding claim 8, claim 8 is the decompression part of claim 1, and combination of Hoffert '853 and Brusewitz '862 teaches decompression (i.e. col. 2, lines 57+ of Hoffert '853), combining (i.e. fig. 15, Mux 149).

Regarding claims 9 - 10, the limitations claimed are substantially similar to claims 2 - 3, therefore the grounds for rejecting claims 2 - 3 also apply here.

Regarding claims 11 - 12 and 20, the limitations claimed are substantially similar to claims 4 - 5, therefore the grounds for rejecting claims 4 - 5 also apply here.

Regarding claims 13 - 14 and 16, fig. 3, code tables 19, 23, 25, 29 and 33, and also fig. 2, are equivalent to encryption table only if the end user has the table.

Regarding claim 17 and 18, Note, having a storage medium or/and communications transmission channel as input/output device would have been obvious and well-known in the prior art of record.

Regarding claim 19, the limitations claimed are substantially similar to claims 8 and 15, therefore the grounds for rejecting claims 8 and 15 also apply here.
